It is from the two great American species, the hardy and easily adaptable Fragaria Virginiana, the wild atrawberry of New England and of the States east of the Rocky Mountains, and the Fragariachilensis that grows wild on the Facilic slope from Oregon to Chili, that the strawberries of commerce and of the garden, both in America and abroad, have been developed.

both in America and abroad, have been developed.

In old English the name is written "Streowberie," which is certainly charming, and there is a pretty tradition that it was given from the early custom in English of selling wild strawberries threaded on grass straws. Some old writers suppose it was derived from the wandering habit of the plant, straw being a corruption of the Angio-Saxon "straw," from which; we have the English verb stray, and so straeberie or strow beerle.

Dr. Pryor suggests that the name was given from the partmen, of the fruit, and, that really add so much to its beauty. There is a good natured rivalry we some of the communions, while others are conceded, but the business of the conention will doubtless be transacted in a harmonious and enthusiastic manner. After selecting their fleket to-day the Renoble and of the entire county should ank up their minds to elect it from top to bottom. If they do this the success of the ticket is assured. The Republicans can carry the county whenever they go to work with a will. It must be remenwell organized and mean to break into the Republican column if possible. Our Population.

The population bulletin just issued by the Census Bureau, shows the country what population it had in 1890. The total is 62 622 250 an increase of 12 466 467, or 24.86 per cent. The males number 32,067,-880, and the females 30,554,370. The for- No. 7 Granite Block, East Market Square. mer have increased faster than the latter since 1880 by 1.64 per cent. It is encouraging to know that 53,372,702 of this population were born in this country, 9,249,547 being foreign born. There were 54,983,-890 white persons in the country in 1890, and 7,638,360 persons of color, which includes pegroes. Chinese, Japanese and civilized Indians. If the population contiques to increase at the same rate per cent during the ten years between 1890 and 1900, the country will enter the new century with over 78,000,000 people. It is more likely to be 80,000,000. The white increase during the last decade was 26.68 per cent., and the colored increase 13.11 per cent. The same proportional increase sould give over 70,000,000 whites and about 9,000,000 colored persons in 1900.

What the Furniture Trade Thinks

From a report of the Committee on Legislation of the National Furniture Manu No. 8 Exchange Block, - State Street. facturers' Association, a meeting of which was held at Cincinnati two weeks ago, we extract the following interesting statetariff on plate glass and furniture cover-

We are now enabled to produce plate glass in this country so cheaply that a much better article can be used at about the same cost, and, as far as your committee can learn, not many manufacturers would use German plates to-day if they were admitted free. The locrease of about twenty-five per cent. In the price of furniture coverings, such as plushes, tapestries or brocatelles, by the McKinley bill was thought to be an injury to the trade at the time of its passage, but the fact is these articles have been steadily decreasing in price, and to-day, are treenly-five per cent. cheaper than they were before the change in the tariff. The increase in the manufacture and competition of trade has brought about this result. Twenty-five years ago a plush parlor sult was a luxury; to-day they can be bought as cheaply as hair cloth suits.

Not only are glass and furniture cover-

Consumers in this section are now buying more largely of American produce and less of Canadian farm products as the effect of the present tariff law becomes more and more apparent. The extent to which this change has already gone may be seen from the official trade statistics recently published by the Canadian Government. These figures have already caused much uneasiness in the Dominion, and may be worth attention in this country as well.

sant Reception in the Hamme reet Church Vestry and Purior The vestry and parlor of the Hammond street church were the scene of a very pleasant event last evening, a reception to the society, given by the Young People's Association connected with the church The rooms had been very prettily prepared for the occasion. Beautiful ferms and flowers had been arranged with artistic effect in different portions of them, and handsome draperies added to the effect.

The walls of the parlor were made attractive by a number of pictures which were kindly loaned by Messrs. A.F. Lee & Co. In one corner of the vestry, behind a screen of woodbine, was Wasgatt's ____ Orchestra, and the fine music discoursed by it during the evening was much sppreciated. The decorations were made by a committee consisting of Misses Taylor, Moore, Valentine, Barker and Nealley and were greatly admired. The furniture and draperies were from the establishment of the G. W. Merrill Farniture Company.

The number that attended was large which contributed much to the success of the event. The reception committee was composed of Rev. H. L. Griffin, Mrs. Miss Glass, Mr. Meylan, Mr. Adams, and Mr. Bourne, and the ushers were Messrs. Harry M. Smith, Abbott C. Smith. Charles W. Semple and Charles E. Mann. From 8 to 10 o'clock the time was passed in a most pleasing and social manner and light refreshments were served to all who desired them.

The event was arranged by the social committee of the Y. P. A., and was an entire success, enjoyed by every one pres

Attempted Incendiariem At 11.50 last night the fire department was called out by an alarm from box 34 at the junction of Hammond and Union streets and the cause was located at the house owned by Michael Finnegan and occupied by Charles Evans and family and Mrs. Nolan, situated at the lower end of Fouth street. Investigation by Assistant Engineer S. A. Fellows showed that somebody had attempted to set the house on fire. There was a pile of shavings saturated with kerosene, between the end of the ell and the stable, and it was burning when found. It had made a smoke but the house did not take fire. A little water ascent was rendered most difficult by the fact that he could not get a firm grasp on the trunk, and had to hold himself up by dasfehing the first joint of his fingers in the cracks in the thick, rough bark. Gradually and painfully he worked his way along until he had reached the first bough, where he took a rest of fully fifteen minutes. Again he started, and, the cliabling being easier, because of numerous boughs, he soon reached the nest. The old eagles had marked his approach, and were circling about ten feet above his head, uttering loud cries. The young eagles qould not fly and hid back in their nest. When Mr. Kirkwood attempted to catch them, they fought savagely with beak, feet and wings to beat him off. After much difficulty he seepred them, thed their feet and wings, and with a stout cyrd lowered them to the ground, just 97 feet below. He then inspected and measured the eagles' nest. It was fully six feet long by eight wide, and eight high—fully large enough to accommodate Mr. Kirkwood in a standing or sitting position. It was built of dry siteks—many of them as thick as a min's wrist—thatched together by grass and small twigs. The roof was storm—proof, a layer of fish, refuse and other matter heing placed on the woodwork and pucked solidity by the feet of the parent birds. The nest, it is said, has been the house of the elder birds for many years. Several attempts have been made to reach it by young men of the For over two years my little girl's life was made miserable by a case of Catarrh.
